The leaders assert that the workers in more than twenty trades will go on strike to-morrow, including eigarmakers in all the leading factories, bakers, drivers of public conveyances, city slaugharrivers of public conveyances, city slaugh-ter house employes, writers, carpenters, painters, machinists, plumbers, smelters, boutmen, etc. The lightermen, steve-deres, wharfmen and others engaged in larbor work say that they cannot strike before Wednesday on account of their agreement to give two days' notice of such intention.

The original grievances of the street car employes, those relating to minor changes in the wage scale resulting from the decision of the company to pay in American, instead of Spiritsh money are almost lost sight of in what is really the main grievance, namely, the companies insistance on refusing to permit its employes to be members of any organization regarded as antagonistic to the company's interests.

This clause has always been a feature in contracts between the company and its employes. The latter claim that the company broke its old contracts when it changed the wage scale and now demand contracts which have no non-union clause.

The general strike will not be a wholly sympathetic one, as several unions will take the opportunity to press various other grievances of their own, for which they hitherto have unsuccessfully contonded for. Workinen in other Cuban cities also are to be asked to strike and the movement is expected to test the strength of the trades unions in Cuba.

No one was injured. A delegation of the non-strikers has demanded the protection of the authorities. The miners to-day unsuccessfully attempted to prevent the discharge of the cargoes of British colliers at Dunkirk. During, the day many processions were organized and meetings held which were attended by crowds of strikers. Everything passed off quietly, however, It has been decided that further efforts should be made to arrange a conference between the workmen and the mine owners. The men't da great extent are satisfied with the increase in pay offered them, but are determined to obtain supervision of pay sheets by their federation, the point on which the dispute practically turns. It is said in authoritative quarters that the companies are inclined to concede the workmen this point, which would probably end the conflict.

Another crisis plainly confronts the government, for the sweeping character of their victory undoubtedly will encourage the liberals to push the government to the wall, and it would seem that the Emperor must yield to the entreaties of those who counsel a flual surrender by issuing a constitution to the people or dispersing the national parliament as soon as it assembles. There seems no alternative accept the choice of one of those two courses.
